INTRODUCTION: Dhauladhars, are themselves a mountain range quite apart from any other mountain range in the Himalayas. It is the outer most part of Himalayas. The rock faces of this granite range are so sharply cut that they fail to hold snow for long as a result you see snow in the gullies and on top. During the trek we walk through some Gaddi tribal villages. Gaddi is a semi nomadic shepherd tribe whose main occupation is agriculture and rearing of sheep and goat. The gaddi shepherds spend the whole summer on the mountains and during winter come back to the plains of Kangra with their flock of sheep and goat.

Dharamsala- the starting point of the trek , is a hill station established during British regime in India. It is located on the base of Dhauladhar mountain range. The place also served as a base for the military troops during British period. Attracted by the beauty of the place many European officer started making it their home and the settlement of European was named McLeod Ganj, in the honor of the Late Sir Donald McLeod, the former Lt. Governor of the province. Now Dharamsala is mainly divided in two parts: Lower Dharamsala, is the district headquarters of Kangra and is the main commercial place. Upper Dharamsala, called McLeod Ganj is the home of Exiled Tibetan Spiritual leader and head His Holiness The Dalai Lama. After Chinese occupation of Tibet in 1959, His Holiness Dalai Lama escaped from Tibet to India and since then He decide to make Dharamsala his home in Exile. His Holiness lives here with thousands of Tibetan refugees who escaped into India.

- ❖ Post breakfast, we drive to an Indian Cookery studio for a full day enjoyable class
- ❖ Although Indian cuisine is unique and rich in variety, it caters for all tastes. Food in India is wide ranging in variety, taste and flavour, and is generally characterised by its somewhat extensive use of spices and herbs. However, Indian cuisines do vary, reflecting the assorted demographics of an ethnically diverse country. Being so diverse geographically, each region has its own cuisine and style of preparation. The unique and strong flavours in Indian cuisine are derived from spices, seasonings and nutritious ingredients such as leafy vegetables, grains, fruits, and legumes. Traditionally, a well-balanced Indian meal contains six tastes – sweet, sour, salty, spicy, bitter and astringent. This theory can explain the use of numerous spice combinations and depth of flavor in Indian recipes.

- ❖ In the evening, we drive to “The Kingdom of Dreams”. Kingdom of dream is India’s first live entertainment and leisure destination point which is located at the apex of the golden triangle of Jaipur, Agra and Delhi. It is a place where the festival that is India is celebrated in the grand and glamorous style. It is a grand palace of gargantuan proportions with lavish interiors. The Kingdom offers you authentic cuisine, live entertainment in the form of Musicals, Dramas, Mythological Shows, Street Dances, Mock Indian Wedding, India’s art, crafts and much more all with modern technology. Kingdom of dreams includes Nautanki Mahal, Showshaa Theatre, Culture Gully, Idea Buzz Lounge and a Theme Restaurant which offers 350 exotic food preparations by certified chefs from across 14 states. But the main attraction and jewel of Kingdom of dreams is Nautanki Mahal, which is built like a palace and is India’s first 850 seat auditorium. see - (<http://www.kingdomofdreams.in/FLASH/index.html>)
